

What is a Composite Volcano?

Composite volcanoes are large volcanoes present around the Ring of Fire, a highly volcanic region bordering the Pacific Ocean. What causes these volcanoes to arise here, and how can we see this in the rock record?

Composite Volcanoes Are Primarily Andesitic

Composite Volcanoes Primarily Form in Subduction Zones

